Ever since it was brought to the attention of users, Dropbox is seen as one of the most useful cloud-based file-sharing servers - after all, it's a quite convenient way to share files with your teammates, both at work and at home. However, if you want to avoid using Dropbox altogether, you can try Disk. Dropbox alternative Let's start with Disk, a simple application you can download on your computer and install - after installing it, the default browser will be opened, prompting you to enter your email address. Next, Disk's dashboard will be opened - just like with Capsula, you need to log in with your email address and a password, in order to access the admin account. Then, you can start creating a list with the users you want to share the Disk server with, which will be able to upload files and store their contents on your computer. You can also choose whether you want the items uploaded by these users to be private or public, with the latter being visible to all people with the same list. Additionally, a preview of all the items on the Disk server is available, so as to help you understand better what exactly you are sharing. Now, let's get a bit more into Disk's features. First of all, it can enable you to share videos as well, so you can offer the files to your colleagues, as well as play them back on their computers. Moreover, you can also add a description for each item on the server, as well as set restrictions on how long each item is valid for. Finally, Disk can also enable you to share images, with the difference that photos are only visible to the users who upload them, whereas videos are also visible to everyone - this feature is really useful, since it might help your teammates to improve their images. Conclusion On the whole, Disk can be considered as a suitable alternative to Dropbox, considering that it also allows you to share videos and photos with your colleagues. Description: Although it might be tempting to use the GoDaddy Public Access server for sharing files, since it gives you a chance to have your own personal cloud, you can definitely go for FileZilla. Particularly, this public cloud is a reliable and powerful alternative to Dropbox. FileZilla alternative Before you install FileZilla on your computer, you will need to log into your FileZilla control panel - this is how you can access the admin account and access your private files.

Capsula is a powerful and easy to use self-hosted file-sharing server, ideal for team leaders who want to ensure all their colleagues have free and unfettered access to their documents. Capsula is fully configurable through a web interface, and it supports file types like PDF, DOC, PPT, XLS, PSD, JPG, PNG, MOV, MP4, GIF, ZIP, XLSX and more. It works on Windows, macOS and Linux, and it can be set up in minutes. Preview the shared files Set up a Capsula server in minutes Capsula is as simple as logging in to the web interface and adding your users. It automatically creates user accounts for your collaborators, and you can add more accounts at any time. All your users can share files with each other through the simple sharing interface. This functionality is super useful when collaborating on complex projects with multiple people. A shared document is publicly accessible or can be shared in a private way. Public documents are shared with everyone and private documents are visible to just the owner. You can set the user quota to limit the number of files users can upload. This is useful if you want to make sure that you do not overwhelm your server with too many files. All your users can access the shared documents on your computer and through the Capsula URL, so you do not need to store the files on a cloud server or send them through email. A powerful collaboration tool for team leaders If you want to ensure the entire team can access a shared document, Capsula is the perfect solution. All your collaborators can access the document through the same link and this can be shared with others in order to collaborate on the same document. Capsula is not only powerful but also easy to use. To set up your server in minutes, simply log in to the web interface, add your users and you are ready to go. Features Self-hosted Capsula is a very reliable file-sharing server, and it works even if you only have the server installed on your local PC. You do not need to store your files on the cloud, or use a shared document service. The shared documents are accessible from your PC, but are also accessible through your Capsula URL. No technical skills required You do not need to install, configure or maintain the Capsula application. Everything is set up through a web interface. It takes less than a minute to create a Capsula server and it's incredibly easy to update or delete the users on your server. Share files with others You can share your documents with other people in your team or with other members of your company. Upload a file, enter the document title and upload a file size limit, then specify whether the file is public or private. A generated URL is automatically sent to the users and you,
