Note: The Photoshop Elements tutorial, available online at www.photoshop.com/support/photoshop_elements/tutorials, shows how to use all the Photoshop Elements features. The Elements software is the result of a decision made by Adobe to stay in the high end of the imaging market rather than move to the less expensive entry-level and shareware markets. The decision makes sense given that its software is better than the competition, and it fills a market niche that nobody else fills: business and home use of digital images. In this book, we explore all the tools and features of Photoshop Elements. We discuss which ones to use for editing and which ones to avoid. This tutorial will take you through the menu structure and other basics of using Photoshop Elements. Figure 1-1 gives you an overview of Photoshop Elements. Use the menu structure in figure 1-1 to open and close files or create a new image. The following list shows you what Photoshop Elements does: • _File_ menu: This menu lets you open existing files, create new ones, save files, and place images in stacks. • _Edit_ menu: This menu lets you work on an open image, crop and straighten an image, and work on any open images. • _View_ menu: This menu lets you view your images and import images. • _Window_ menu: This menu lets you display several windows at once. • _Zoom_ menu: This menu lets you zoom in or out, pan, and change the display type. • _Help_ menu: This menu contains the program's built-in help information. Here are tips for using Photoshop Elements: Clicking with the trackpad or mouse is faster than clicking with your finger on the touchpad. And when using the Touch Panel to select, you can see where your cursor is on the screen, making it easier to see what you're selecting. Click the green trackpad at the bottom of the screen to open the touch panel. When you finish editing a file, you must save it before you close the window or the file is lost. If you forget to save your image, a small paper airplane icon appears in the lower-right corner of the file window. Click the X to the right of the paper airplane icon and a dialog box appears. This dialog box contains the option to save the image as a new file.

Q: SQL Server 2012 - Unable to execute the query I have following configuration in SQL Server 2012. When I try to run the below query, I am getting error as Msg 245, Level 16, State 1, Line 9 Conversion failed when converting the varchar value '0' to data type int. I don't understand, if I try to cast the string to int, why it is giving error? A: You have to convert from decimal to int, you can use: cast(YourField As Integer) Try_Convert(YourField, Int) And then to convert from decimal to decimal with trunc() Try_Cast(Try_Trunc(TheIntegerValue, 0), Decimal) Adhesion between biological membranes of different species, such as the membranes of different red blood cells of a mammal, is well known. The adhesion between membranes of two mammalian cells depends on the class of antigens which are mutually shared by these membranes, and is an important barrier against the formation of heterologous antibodies in mammals. Immunoisolation techniques have recently been developed which enable the isolation of mammalian cells from the serum, and which permit the enrichment and/or propagation of the desired cells, even in the presence of heterologous antibodies. The "passive immunosorption" method consists of immunising animals with cytotoxic cells and then treating cells other than the immunised cells with the antiserum (see, for example, U.S. Pat. No. 4,457,931). The immunosorption method employs the use of monoclonal antibodies which are specific to the mammal from which the cytotoxic cell was derived. These monoclonal antibodies are used to form complexes with the cytotoxic cells which selectively bind to the membrane of a target cell. The absence of cytotoxic cells in the medium ensures that the target cells are not killed or harmed during this procedure. The improvement of this method is provided by U.S. Pat. No. 4,588,362 which describes the use of polyclonal antibody in place of the monoclonal antibody. It is usually preferred, however, to use the monoclonal antibodies which are prepared or at least partially purified on cytotoxic cells. Both U.S. Pat. Nos. 4,457,931 and 4,588,362 describe the selection
