1. Field of the Invention Embodiments of the present invention relates to an image forming apparatus having a heat fixing device for fixing a toner image onto a recording material by heating and pressing with a pair of looped pressing members, a heating device for heat-fixing the toner image onto the recording material, a moving passage for passing the recording material through a nip section between the pair of pressing members and the heating device. 2. Description of the Related Art In image forming apparatuses, such as a printer, a copying machine, a facsimile apparatus and a multifunction product, a heat fixing device including a heater and a pressing section for heat fixing an unfixed toner image onto a recording material is used. The fixing device of this type of image forming apparatus usually has a heat fixing roller or a heat fixing belt. The heat fixing roller is a cylindrical rotational member or a rotational member on which a heater is embedded in the inside, the surface of which is made a heat fixing material. The heat fixing belt is stretched around two rollers, on each of which a heater is embedded in the inside, so that a toner image can be heat-fixed on a recording material passed through a nip section (pressure contact section) formed between the two rollers. The heat fixing device rolls or loops the heat fixing belt and rotates the heat fixing roller or the heat fixing belt by the rotation of an external rotational driving source, such as a motor. The pressing device provided to the heat fixing device at the nip section between the heat fixing roller or the heat fixing belt and a pressurizing member makes the heat fixing roller or the heat fixing belt press the recording material to the pressing member, thus fixing the unfixed toner image onto the recording material. If the pressing force of the nip section is increased too much, there is a possibility that a

Tue, 12 Feb 2014 18:41:53 +0000RRDBDecrypt: User Drives A Mac BY CONTROLLER IN PUBG MOD RECOMMENDED TOO FOR HACKING MACThis invention relates to a device for controlling the leveling of a vehicle suspension system which provides basic adjustable damping and anti-roll characteristics to the air suspension components of the vehicle, which includes a variably programmed positioner/controller responsive to control signals received from a position sender. When the position sender produces a position signal which corresponds to a predetermined position of the vehicle, a controller sequentially and variably opens and closes the damping and anti-roll valves to control the relative damping and camber rates responsive to a preselected "desired" vehicle position corresponding to a predetermined vehicle profile. The position sender generally is in the form of a transducer that measures vehicle position by measuring the position of the vehicle at known locations between the wheels. When it is desirable to adjust vehicle camber or level, either direction motion can be used and in either direction the vehicle is raised or lowered by the same amount. Transverse motion can be used to adjust the position of the vehicle for level adjustment. It is known to provide damping and vehicle leveling of a vehicle suspension system having a variably programmable positioner/controller responsive to a position sender which contains a transducer which can readily be retrofitted to provide damping and leveling adjustments. With this damping and leveling device, its calibration is set at the factory by the vehicle manufacturers so that the damping and leveling characteristics at any particular vehicle position are fixed or set. However, this prior variable damping and leveling device is limited in that only one vehicle position can be adjusted at a time. Further, although the damping and leveling characteristics are dependent upon vehicle position, there is no way to change the damping or leveling characteristics beyond the predetermined set values or stored values. It would thus be desirable to provide a variable damping and leveling adjuster for a vehicle suspension system which overcomes the limitations of the prior art adjustable damping and leveling system..
