Use the Photoshop Panels and Panel Plugins to make your.Polypropylene extruded films and sheets have become an important form of packaging for a wide variety of commercial products including milk, juice, food and other products. Generally, these films have found use as single and double ply material, and also as a layer in biaxially oriented films. Polypropylene is especially desirable because it is easily printable, it is biodegradable, and it is relatively inexpensive to manufacture. Unbiaxially oriented polypropylene film is generally produced by extruding a tubular film which is then transversely stretched by passing the film through tension rolls. For certain applications this film, however, is not suitable because it is relatively thick, making it difficult to use and to apply printer's ink. To reduce the thickness of the film and to improve its printability, biaxially oriented polypropylene film is commonly made by the tubular blown film technique. This process involves extruding a biaxially oriented, monoaxially stretched tubular film and transversely stretching the film on a set of tenter rolls. While in one form this film generally has superior print
