E/R/G (8/10) - Games Daily Truly it's been a long time coming. I remember in 2016 I was really excited about this game. I gave it a go, and while the story was nice it wasn't quite what I expected from the Elden Ring. In this 2nd attempt, Elden Ring does so much more than just give us lore. They not only took the lore and developed it in a way that makes it worth playing through, they put a world full of possibilities and a level of challenge that will test your limits. The Story In the never ending world of The Lands Between, the earth is covered in a light gray mist. Among the mist lurks something called the Ashen Mist. The day of the two nations of the Shining World, this mist was created by those who were deemed unworthy. As the people they once served long for their redemption, they spilled the Ashen Mist on the earth, creating a fog. Over the years, the Ashen Mist has warped the world and the people of the Shining World, but at last, they have found the first of the Elden, heroic figures who were later known as the Elden Ring, to stop the Ashen Mist. Unfortunately, the Elden Ring is going through their own dark days. In the center of the Lands Between, a sinister force known as the Lord of Desolation attempts to bring the world to ruin and dominate all those not aligned with him. The Lords of the Elden Ring have reached their limit, and some have begun to question their duty. You play as a young man who becomes an Elden Lord. Amidst all this, you have to make a decision: will you let the Ashen Mist rule the Lands Between, or will you drive it away? The World Design The Lands Between is a world that would only be found in a fairytale. It's a wide, dark world which has a wide variety of landscapes which you have to traverse. Each time you travel to a new area you will be in a different location. In some areas of the world the landscape can change entirely. This could mean you will be traveling across a grassy plain to trek across a long, twisting, rocky canyon, or the other way around. The Ashen Mist covers everything, and while you may not be able to see it, it can be felt. Every step you take will fade the ground beneath your feet, bff6bb2d33

"The home had quite a steep walkway so we wanted to avoid that," says Team Ockert designer John Ockert, who along with his wife, Stephanie Ockert, designed the house. "We wanted to make the stairs go into this characterful little house." The home was also designed to match the patio that surrounds it. "We have a big patio around the house," says Ockert. "That patio was really important to this house. It was a way to show people that this is a really livable house." Related Stories Leading the other side of the patio is a deck. Ockert explains that "that whole deck was designed to show clients that they were going to have a fantastic outdoor space. We wanted to show this beautiful environment that they were going to be enjoying a lot." This is the view from the deck where, in the morning, the sun comes up behind the mountains. "We wanted it to be quiet," says Ockert. "We wanted it to be peaceful and quiet. We wanted it to be serene. That's what drew people to the house." The kitchen features both a breakfast bar and a breakfast nook. The breakfast bar is just big enough for the Ockerts to have a few bites of breakfast while the nook is just a place to hang out. Looking out the kitchen, one can see the kitchen window and the patio. "The kitchen opens to the patio and then the bathroom opens to the patio," says Ockert. The home's black-and-white bathrooms are highlighted by large windows that allow for an abundance of natural light. "It's small," says Ockert, looking out at the serene landscape. "It's only 4,000 square feet." The all-white interior features black tile, the same tile that appears throughout the house. "We wanted a very simple solution to the interior," says Ockert.
